Dr Niklas Luhmann is a medical doctor and completed his Master of Science (Msc) in International Public Health at the University of Berlin and Copenhagen in 2006. He has been working for many years on access to healthcare of key populations with a focus on issues around HIV and viral hepatitis prevention, treatment and care access. He joined the French NGO Médecins du Monde (MdM) in 2005 and is today working as Harm Reduction and HIV/AIDS advisor for MdM at the headquarters in Paris. For the past two years, he has worked increasingly on issues related to hepatitis C treatment access in low and middle income countries and France.
