e-GOHNTE - Contributors' Information

Please carefully read the following instructions

e-GOHNTE is published on the WHO/Occupational Health website and disseminated to a wide and diverse population. It is a vehicle to communicate specific activities and projects that contribute to the implementation of the WHO Global Plan of Action for Workers’ Health, 2008-2017 (GPA) (http://www.who.int/occupational_health/publications/global_plan/en/index.html) for the benefit of stakeholders in workers’ health.

Scope of e-GOHNTE

- Raise awareness among countries and international actors about the actions in the area of workers’ health by WHO, Member States, CCs and international partners in the process of implementing the GPA
- Deliver concrete examples of actions that improve workers’ health to our main constituencies, the ministries of health
- Provide a platform for exchange of news, information, experiences and resources about protecting and promoting the health of workers
- Stimulate collaboration between GOHNTE members, other experts and WHO.

Audience

- All WHO offices,
- Public health experts and decision-makers in the ministries of health,
- Labour and other government institutions,
- Researchers and services dealing with health of workers providers,
- Organizations of employers,
- Trade unions,
- Private sector and civil society,
- Public health and primary care providers,
- And the lay public.

What do we publish in e-GOHNTE?

Style

- Clear and non-technical language (engaging and accessible for the non-specialist)
- News briefs of no more than 300 words and longer articles with no more than 500 words
- Pictures/diagrams/charts/quotes in high quality
- No sexist, racist and other discriminatory or devaluing language.
- Contributors are requested to provide full names, titles, Programmes or Departments, Institute names, and e-mail addresses.
Content

- WHO GPA-related activities illustrating action on its implementation
- Brief reports on events, conferences or workshops in which ministries of health, CCs and WHO were involved, and of interest to a wider audience
- Announcement of new peer-reviewed, published scientific articles by WHO or Network members introducing new knowledge about successful policies: good practice/case studies; new data and neglected issues, etc. of broad interest may be briefly summarized as “news item” with link.

Note: The Editor reserves the right to edit manuscripts and to choose which contribution will be published.

Reference style to be followed (if required)

How do I submit my work?

Send your article as an attachment to ochmail@who.int. The subject line should indicate ‘GOHNET contribution’.