Preventing Sexual Exploitation and Abuse
Sexual exploitation and abuse represents a catastrophic failure to protect the people we serve.

It causes harm and runs counter to all we do to work for better health for everyone, everywhere.
If you have knowledge of sexual exploitation and abuse you can report it to the Integrity Hotline.

The Integrity Hotline is an independent service which takes in reports confidentially and when requested, anonymously.

EMAIL  integrity@expolink.co.uk

Sexual Exploitation and Abuse is prohibited conduct for all WHO and affiliated personnel. It is grounds for disciplinary action including summary dismissal, and criminal proceedings. This includes:

- Sex for money, employment, goods, assistance or services, including sexual favours or other forms of humiliating, degrading or exploitative behaviour
- Sex with children (anyone under the age of 18)
- Sex with direct programme beneficiaries
Survivors can contact the nearest WHO office for support.

- Where immediate medical assistance is needed, survivors will be referred to the nearest medical center.
- All survivors of sexual exploitation and abuse will be treated with respect and dignity, and are entitled to safe and confidential assistance.
- If the survivor is a child or has a disability, additional considerations for protection and support will be given.
