Over the years, sexual transmission has become more dominant with transmission among men who have sex with men accounting for 25.5% of infections, while heterosexual transmissions accounts for the remaining 69.5%.

Tens of millions of people (including men who having sex with men, sex workers, people who inject drug, partners of people living with HIV, and etc.) are at higher risk of acquiring HIV, and have been put as target audiences of HIV prevention program historically. On the other side, several sub-populations (including client of sex workers, female partners of MSM, people engaging in casual sex, people using synthetic drugs, transgender women), who will greatly impact the epidemic in China in coming years considering the factors including large size, limited HIV knowledge and awareness, HIV risk behaviours and etc., have been largely neglected in the HIV response in many place. The HIV epidemic will keep expanding if quality and effective prevention interventions are not urgently implemented among the populations on the scale required to control the epidemic.

In 2019, WHO China plans to start an awareness-raising campaign on the importance of safer sex that will specifically target dating app users by reaching them through advertising placed in these apps as well as KOL engagements.

• Conduct need assessment of the target audiences, and develop tailored intervention strategies.
• Mobilize the media and corporate resources, as well as potential key opinion leaders (KOLs) from industries to be engaged in the campaign
• Develop media products and content for media and the event, including the event program, advocacy content, toolkits for KOLs, media release, etc.
• Provide on-site event support
• Monitor the uptake of the key messages/media products.

4. Expected outputs:
• Rapid assessment conducted with basic understanding obtained on the range of popular digital networking media esp. dating and social apps in China, as well as the basic features of the users and their preference in the media products, contents, etc.
• Collaboration and working mechanism established on engaging the key influential social media (e.g. dating apps) that are being widely used among the key populations to promote HIV prevention and testing. Primary engagement is expected to be digital media but selected offline engagement with targeted groups will be considered where possible.
• Media products, contents and targeted messages developed for the key populations on HIV prevention and testing.
• Increased awareness of HIV risk, and increase access to HIV prevention and testing services among the target populations.
