Annex 1: Detailed Terms of Reference

The World Health Organization (WHO) Philippines is looking for an individual or institutional contractual partner to provide technical assistance for the conduct of training of trainers and the development of instructional materials for the flipchart on prevention and control of noncommunicable diseases as part of the Healthy Hearts Project, under an Agreement for Performance of Work (APW) contract.

1. Background

Non-communicable diseases (NCDs), which include cardiovascular diseases and diabetes, remain a big challenge in the Philippines. Despite many efforts in recent years, NCDs continue to be the greatest killer accounting for more than two-thirds of all deaths in the country. These diseases have been shown to negatively impact the population's health, as well as the economy. NCDs cost the national economy an estimated PHP 756.5 billion per year, equivalent to 4.8% of the country's annual gross domestic product (UNDP & WHO, 2019). Over the years, there has been steady progress in the reduction of tobacco use, but the prevalence of other risk factors such as alcohol use, unhealthy diet, overweight and obesity, and diabetes has continued to rise, putting millions of Filipinos at risk for developing NCDs and suffering many complications, including death.

To support the reduction of these NCD risk factors particularly hypertension, the WHO Philippines is currently implementing the Healthy Hearts Project in Western Visayas in collaboration with the Department of Health Western Visayas Center for Health Development (DOH WV CHD). The initiative seeks to strengthen local health system governance, enhance service delivery for NCD-related services, and increase demand and health service utilization for NCDs. These outcomes need active participation from the community, where barangay health workers (BHWs) play an important role in the delivery of health information and assist in the delivery of other health services within the health system.

Under the Primary Health Care (PHC) framework, BHWs are one of the frontliners who serve as the first point of contact between the community and the health care system. They are vital at the barangay level because they support health service providers in delivering different health care services. They undergo several training programs under any accredited government and non-governmental organization and voluntarily render primary health care services in the community after having been accredited to function as such by the local health board following the guidelines promulgated by the Department of Health.

To support the BHWs in delivering accurate health information on NCDs at the community level, the initiative has adapted the advocacy material (flipchart) developed during the demonstration project for the WHO's HEARTS Technical Package in one of the districts of the City of Manila. The job aid will serve as a visual guide in conducting health education during home visits. It contains key health messages on NCD risk factors, including hypertension and diabetes, to help the target audience gain or enhance their awareness or knowledge of their health and that of their family.

The primary objective of this endeavor is to ensure that BHWs can understand and deliver the content of the job aid accordingly and correctly during face-to-face or one-on-one communication. Advancing the capacity of the BHWs will support the improvement of NCD services. Thus, well-equipped personnel can guarantee better demand generation for health services in the community.
