There will be an unprecedented growth in demand for health workers by 2030, with the anticipated creation of around 40 million new jobs. The health and social sector employs more women than any other sector, with women comprising over two-thirds of the workforce. Women health workers are the foundation for universal health coverage. Investing in the health and social workforce is not only critical to avert the projected shortfall of 18 million health workers by 2030, it could also have a transformative impact on women’s economic participation & empowerment.

Join the World Health Organization & the International Labour Organization for an interactive panel exploring the investment opportunity in the health & social workforce for women’s economic participation and empowerment with Member States, civil society and health workers organizations.

Register (by March 8th): https://goo.gl/forms/Dt3tb16KkYV9OUMV2