Her Royal Highness Princess Muna Al-Hussein
Princess of Jordan, Global Health Advocate for Nursing and Midwifery

Her Royal Highness Princess Muna Al-Hussein is a world-renowned figure for her role in global health and social development.

HRH advocates for programmes that support the Sustainable Development Goals with emphasis on alleviating poverty, promoting the health of mothers and infants and strengthening the health workforce. As a WHO patron of nursing and midwifery in the Eastern Mediterranean Region, Vice President of the Royal College of Nursing of the United Kingdom and an honorary adviser for WHO Collaborating Centre for Nursing Development in Jordan, HRH has addressed several health fora on the importance of strengthening and empowering the health workforce globally.

HRH has taken a special interest in developing nursing and midwifery to enhance the quality, equity and efficiency of health care. HRH helped found Princess Muna College of Nursing in 1962 as her early commitment to the provision of quality nursing and the advancement of nursing services, practice and education.

HRH is the founder and president of the Jordanian Nursing Council, which was established in 2002.

HRH is a recipient of six honorary doctoral degrees and a number of international awards for her leadership role in advancing health and welfare globally and her contribution to the nursing profession, including the Honorary fellowship from the UK Royal College of Physicians in 2014, the Honorary Fellowship of the Faculty of Nursing and Midwifery of the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland, in 2015 and the Sigma Theta Tau International Archon Award in 2007.
