How to transition to a world where health, equity and well-being are fully mainstreamed into public policies and programmes and integrated into decision-making processes of all sectors.
TOWARDS HEALTHIER POPULATIONS
A NEW VISION

One of the three strategic priorities of WHO’s 13th General Programme of Work is Promoting Healthier Populations. A new division of “Healthier Populations” has been created through which WHO aims at contributing to 1 billion people enjoying better health and well-being by addressing the broad determinants of health.

The expanded new division covers public health areas related to the environment and climate, social determinants including violence prevention and road safety, food and nutrition including diet, health promotion and behavioural health risks, including smoking and physical inactivity, among others. This technical briefing will discuss the vision for and work of this new division: what it is about, what it aims to achieve, and how it will go about it.

Programme:

Moderation by James Chau

Vision by Dr. Naoko Yamamoto, WHO Assistant Director-General
Division of Healthier Populations

Technical presentation by WHO leaders
The mission and necessary steps to achieve Healthier Populations.

Moderated panel and question-and-answers
Senior health and other public officials, public health agencies, cities and civil society. Panel introductory remarks by Dr. Ilona Kickbusch, Director of the Global Health Centre.