Title

Health Workforce Diagnostic Platform: responding to HRH challenges

Organiser

WHO-HRH

Objective

WHO has developed a range of resources to help policy makers and practitioners plan and manage improvements in their health workforce. Resources cover technical assistance, tools, guidance and methods. Application of some tools or guidance may also require technical assistance. The current stock of resources is readily available, but suffers from under utilisation – perhaps due to lack of awareness and profile amongst target audiences, but also due to the way in which resources are made available to intended users. A framework for conceptualising health workforce challenges is being articulated as an entry point for countries to think about and address their particular health workforce challenges. This could provide the basis for a carefully designed platform or portal that aims to improve the accessibility and usability of existing health workforce resources.

The objectives of the event are:

- to provide feedback for improvement of WHO HRH existing and future WHO resources (tools, guidance and methods) in a package/framework;
- to suggest ways that these resources can also be linked to those of partners.

Outcome

Practical suggestions for improvement on the packaging of the resources and tools.
