SE-8: INNOVATIVE APPROACHES & PARTNERSHIPS TO IMPROVE THE HEALTHCARE WORKFORCE

Saturday, 9 November | 4:00 – 5:30 p.m. | Room 2

There is a growing consensus that leadership and management (L&M) development for health professionals is critical to improving the efficiency and effectiveness of health systems. Current models of L&M involve business school faculty designing and delivering classroom as well as distance learning around standard leadership and management topics often including work with case studies. Business tools and innovations in costing models have also proven to improve the healthcare workforce. The panel will address: 1) a range of best practices in building partnerships between business schools and other higher education institutions with healthcare development programs; 2) new tools in helping NGOs and governments to make HRH decisions.
